head of this tremendous adminlatrative set-up,

Fow people real-Ira the extent of his functions, most of which aren't even suggested in the constitution, and few laws denne them. They have grown like

We are reminded of the scope of the presidential duties by Willard Kiplinger in his "Washington Is Like He points out that the President as leader of his party runs the party policies through the national committee. Some times the party line isn't working. You re-call the siew over meat? A meeting of Democratic party leaders, at of such matters. That machinthe moment when the President was preparing to announce at a news conference that he opposed remov-Ing the controls on ment prices. passed a resolution asking Chairman Hannegan to confer with ndministrative officials concerning the removal of such controls.

The President, as the top executive, heads the executive set-up and he appoints the men who run the executive machinery. He can't talk to each one every day. When there is friction a hot-box often develops. There are plenty of examples in history from Ickes and Wallace, back to Lincoln and Seward, and

Chief Executive's Task Never Ends

The President Issues "executive orders"-which someone has to write for him but which have the force of law - and the President must see that they are properly interpreted. Again there is trouble if these decrees tread on congressionof prerogatives.

He has to get bills which he to vors passed. Frequently he writes the first drafts of such bills with the help of his legal advisors, lie is expected, if necessary, to "put the heat on" to get them through congress. This means a lot of work lack authority. These advisors are in conference with congressional leaders on the phone and through his personal agents. A tactiess agent can easily upset the applecath. Remember how Tommy Corcoren used to get under the skin of congress? blany others, well intentioned and otherwise, who came and went, might be named.

The President has to make up the budget, with the help of the budget director. If the director makes mistakes or asks for too much or too little, it is the White House that takes the rap This involves billions,

He appoints the Justices of the Suprome court and federal judges. A had choice may be fatal, and yet the person can't know the personal history of every likely candidate in this sense the President forms the legal thinking of his era.

He is not only his own and his party's but also the nation's chief publicity man A slip of the tongue not only can luse an election, but siso could start a war. If war comes, he has to run it, for the strategy in the field is based on broad objectives decided at home. It was by no means merely milltary opinion which decided when and where the lovation of Europe Look place

These are only a few of the things President has to think shoot. We have omitted meetion of many minor but time-consuming matters such as whether the architectural beauty of the White House shall be allered with a new wing, or where some visiting potentate shall sit at the table. All full of dynamite.

It was the death of Woodrow Wil. see which brought the presidential workload to public attention. He died, as much from overwork as from his disspraintment ever repudistion of the League of Hatlons. Berlous study of the problem of furalishing a means to lighten the prestdential burden began abortly there-efter, but it was not until 1939 that e specific plan was drawn up and submilled to congress. Must Keep Close Check on Aides

A pitiful example of the breakdown of the White House machinery was the recent Wallace ruckus. The President never need have been placed in the position he was,

It is not a President's job to read over every document submitted to him. No head of a business as big as the government would dream of trying to do that. But somebody should have read both the Wallace memorandum on foreign policy and the Wallace speech and apprised the President of what they contained and implied. Whether it is the President's fault that he didn't have properly experienced bired help, is another matter. That his hired help didn't function, caused the

An explanation, it not an excuse, has been offered in this case. The job of reading over public statements of administration mem- PARIS: bers to see that they didn't conflict was handled by the OWI during the Italian Pact war. Before that the White House machinery had always taken care ery had not been again set in motion when OWI ceased to function.

The fault was not that the President didn't prevent the Wallace-Byrnes clash, but that he was not prevented from preventing it.

I can think of only one similar bad mistake made by President Roosevolt which parallels the Wallace mix-up and it was due to a similar but not the same cause. It involved the highly technical question of the public debt. An "assistant," supposed to be an expert furnished the an important public statement. The eagle-eyed financial writers caught in's axiom that "a people which It. The "expert" was called to ac- takes its destiny into its own hands count; he furnished new figures, is invincible."
Was wrong again and caught again. The Russian The President was forced to make a second public correction.

The duties of a President are simply too great for any one man, So Presidents have always had personal advisors, some times they were given an office, some times they had no official title-like Colonel House in the Wilson regime. To-day we hear little about presidential "administrative assistants" but we hear a great deal about a group of "advisors" who have falled to function properly in splie of the fact that unlike the executive assistants they too "close" to the President. And they have been criticized by other members of the administration for standing between department heads, the congressional and party leaders. They are all old, close, personal friends of the President. They are inexperienced in government.

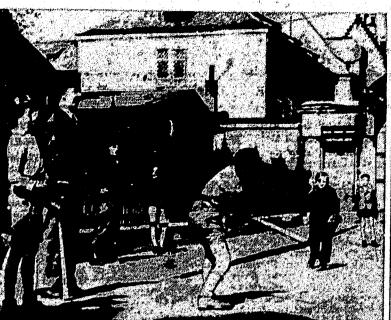

Whether President Truman's little circle of "cronles" has helped or hindered him is beside the question. No one can dispute the fact that they were chosen because of their loyalty rather than because of their experience. The question is whether presidential duties, as they exist today, can be delegated even to a well trained, highly capable staff.

They can, is the answer, IF such a stoff is not blocked by higher suthorities who, from motives of love, hate, polities, religion, temperament, taxte or previous condition of servitude, use such authority, other than in the public good.

Telephone calls at the rate of lour s minute asking snawers to radio quiz questions were reported destroying the morale of a Brooklyn library. From how on the line is quizzy.

The President has a new "Sacred Cow." The winged rummant as it browses in the Washington sirport puts the other big transport planes in the call class.

convention that nominated Gov. Alfred Landon of Kansas as the Republican candidate for President, Spangler, then vice-chairman of the Republican national committee, opened a western headquarters of the party in Chicago. In December, 1933, he began offering factual information regarding the operations of government to the rural press of the nation. In the material offered there were no vituperative condemnations of the opposing parties. There was nothing that to be, first of all, an agent of the could be considered partisan unless a plain statement of facts about and securing strict justice. government operation could be considered as such. The rural newspaper editors, always chary of propaganda, did not consider the material anything other than what was claimed for it, a presentation of facts. Close to 6,000 rural editors asked for, and printed the material. That service to the newspapers continued each week up to, and for n week after, the convention in late

He had molded public opinion with the presentation of those facts at a time when politics as such was not being talked.

Then came the more than three hectic months of the activecampaign waged under a new party management. Spangler's factual material was thrown into the discard. In its place were the Urades and recrim-Inations that are usual in political campaigns, Oratorical effort shouted charges and countercharges. Each week naw the Republicans losing votes that Spangler's facts had created, We all know the final result.

That pre-convention campaign, as conducted by Spangler, would teach me two leasons. First, to give the public unvarnished facts. The people will digest them into spinions. When the facts do not conform to what the people expect or want of government, they will vote for a change. They resent condemnation of one party by the other. They will do their own condemning when the facts call for such action.

Second, I would conduct my fact campaign as far in advance of an election as possible. I would start in a voice that accums a grown, next one. I could make more votes when the people were not being agsailed by campaign oratory, and were in a more reasoning mood. And I would not undo what I had to employees of additional income accomplished by indulging in tirades.

CHAPTER VIII

After a mile or so Doane worked cautiously up a slight rise. He nodded to Monte when he came back, and they went on, changing direction a bit.

For long periods of time now they halted. Danne cannily took advantage of the roll and irregularities of the country, following the gullies and depressions. A mounted figure against the skyline could be seen for miles; so could dust. They drew up the rim of a small, ragged range of rock hills and buites. Again Doane pulled rein, studying the approaching riders for a long while.

"They'll hit through at about those next buttes," he decided, "That ought to suit us as well as anywhere else."

"This is to be ambush?" asked Monte thoughtfully. "No," snapped Doane, "We give them the chance to surrender first." "We are two against five. I do not think these approaching riders will want to-well, surrender." "We'll take those odds. I'll be glad of 'emi'

"I do not quite understan", my frien'."

"Ever since I was a kid, Monte, I've been riding on the side of the law," muttered Doane softly, "This Maxmilla affair now-just one thing left for me to do! A straight road, I got to do it. Flick knew I would. This is bank robbery, killing! . . . But the way things are, Monte, I guess I don't want to ride back. Anyhow I like the odds!"

'Yes?" "Yes." came into Doane's voice: "Monte, you asked me a question a while ago and here's your answer. You're going to do a thing I can't do. I owe that girl everything-my life; the law owes her something, too, I figure, because of its one-time blindness. D'you see that? When things break now, Monte, you're going to get her out-alone! See? You got to do it! Don't mind anything else. That's why, if you hadn't offered to come with me, I'd have made you come. But I've known from the start that that was your reason for being with me. Now it's a thing you've got to do!"

A Desperate Plan To Save Dolores

On the instant the scene changed. Something moved the coming five riders to forge into a fast lope. Watching them, Doane swung back from the rim. Under shelter, the roan shot forward. Monte beside him. At a furious pace they beat along the far side of the hills, through the boulder-strewn depressions and across the side guilles, in an effort to round the first butte and ride into the face of the five. Between the butter of the sharply defined ridge was a small, slot-like pass, hemmed by sandstone walls of odd formation. Wind-eroded pipes stood up against the walls, like deformed fingers or lob-headed stalagmiles. Their feet rested in talus from the walls above, banks of slash-edged rock that had fallen down. One end of the tlny, desertformed pass could not be seen from the other. Reining the roan, Donne could sear the rattle of shod hoofs echoing between the walls. Monte moved to one side. They halted in the floor of the pass. No words.

Donne's gaze was fixed on the bend of the pass. Walling, Motionless. He was a figure of steel, steely gun in one band, muzzle slightly illied. The blue color of the roan in the afternoon light added to the illuston. Not long to walt-

Hard-ridden mounts founded the turn. As swiftly spade bits checked them, brutally threw the saddle ant-

Dass. "Surrender-in the name of the law!"

A harsh laugh answered him. The distance was too great to plainly distinguish features. For an instant Donne wondered how he know that lough, where he had heard it before? The sound roused some slow, deep anger in him. It was something

Deputy sheriff Jim Doane sets out to | several things as one, The Maxmilla Cowman's Mortgage and Loan Bank had suffered this loss by robbery and killing, according to Flick's telegram—and that was the bank in which La Rue had interest. La Rue, then, must have hit trail from town even before Flick got away with the main posse!

Donne was suddenly able to recognize the four riders with La Rue, substantiating his conclusion. The four were those deputized men Flick had pushed on northward, to Maxmilla City; the four riders Donne had discharged from Rancho Hermanos the morning of his arrival, who had later met up with Flick in San Loreto, joining his first posse in search of the girl. Donne gazed at the five men and his lips curled.

was a picture of motionless grace, lips drawn in a set smile.

The first taut deadliness of the scene was even intensified. The five riders did not come forward like one posse approaching other men of the law. Like fire, a new thought snapped in Doane's brain. There was sudden flerce Joy in his burning eyes. His lips bit off words, to the approaching La Rue: "Stop where you are!"

He heard La Rue's laugh answer him again. The distance was halved - little over forty yards now. Thirty! The five riders had spread a bit. Each man for himself. Men crouched in their saddles, like wolves crouching for the throat lesp. In the resounding ceho of La Rue's shot there came a rattle through the pass, like machine-gun fire. Donne spurred forward, shooting low over the saddle, the gun a living thing in his hand. Fierce exultation alled him. No conscious thought; no time to consider This isque was forced. He had declared himself clearly; La Rue understood Here somehow, between desert walls, was marked the end of a long, long trail

Monte suddenly paused. He seemed to balance himself-swayand he came forward only by some supreme effort of will. There was still that set, white smile between his lips. Shivering as though with palsy, hands with the handsome guns outflung, Monte lunged a pace more and fell half across the down horse. Doane caught at his shoulder to pull him on.

A rumbling, great echo growled hoarsely into silence. Suddenly the Monte lay still. Now even the clatter of hoofs had ceased. Struggling, teeth gritted. Doane got at his belt and reloaded. Twisting back, he peered over the roan.

The mounted man had halted at the turn of the pass, waiting undecidedly. Doane saw Suarez and the rider fallen across him, the gun that had just become volceless in the man's hand. At another spot a boot stuck grotesquely into the air. That might be La Rue. Or again it

WORKERS' INHUMANITY TO WORKERS

By George Peck was Robert Burns who wrote, 'Man's inhumanity to man makes! countless thousands mourn." May I be permitted to paraphrase this Edward Chase worked for Elmer pigram of the beloved Scotch po- Cole recently, 17 A modern version could well Frederick Davis of Auburn visit-read, "Workers' Inhumanity To ed at the home of Ross Martin a Workers." Countless examples few days last week. could be cited to prove justification could be cited to prove justification Recent callers at Rawson Mar-for taking poetic license with the tins were: Leland Farr, West Pothe Burns. There is room for but Mr and Mrs Lee Mills and sons,

On September 10, 1945, a wage increase of 12 cents per hour became effective for all hour rated employees of Studebaker Corporation. This was well in advance of ncreases granted by other units of the automobile industry. At the family, Bryant Pond called on same time Studebaker agreed that Gladys Bailey recently. if the increase granted to its employees by General Motors were rore than 12 cents an hour, it would grant its employees a further increase to match that of confined to her home for the past General Motors, Actually, Studeaker gave its workers an addi- ton has been caring for her. iunal 612 cents per hour a week afore General Motors settled on an 1814 cent increase.

Consequently, there were no grounds for a strike and there vas no strike at Studebaker. Studebaker workers had every right to expect steady employment at falr wages. Studebaker management had every right to expect teady employment at fair wages, Studebaker management had every right to expect it would be able to proceed full speed ahead toward meeting its projected produc-tion schedule of passenger cars trucks. Here was a group of union het, through collective bagaining, without recourse to slow-down walk-out or strike; and a management that had voluntarily and speedily granted those demands. But alas!, these expectations are not realized. To quote Roert Burns again:

The best laid schemes o' mice and men gang aft a-gley An leafe us nought but grief and main for promis'd joy."

From October 1, 1945 to June 30, 646, Studebaker employees, Mem. in session. JAW-CIO, lost no proximately 15,000,000 man hours work, or better than $20,090,000. that union workers themselves are the 134,500 automobile units hich Studebaker had scheduled r this period, only 43,011 were utually produced.

And why this stupendous loss to tudebaker workers and this failng so far short of production thedule? They were due almost rtirley to WORKERS INHI-ANITY TO WORKERS -- to trikes and slow downs on the part my striking going to have on work OTHER UNION WORKERS in clants that supply parts to Stude-laker. During this nine-month eriod there were 34 such strikes. Ind the Studebaker employees incree such inhuman treatment forn other workers? There is always a reason if your small girl of five begins to act queerly, to do inexplicable things. There is a reason for adolescent depression, insubordination, timidities, insidence, inhibitions, But when a child is loved, protected, well fed, carefully educated, these symptoms are bewildering to a kood mainer She looks in per plexity at the balling small girl, and finally washes her hands of the whole problem and takes the child to a child psychologist- and pays him $10 a visit.

TREAT YOUR OWN MIND

We have all heard a lot about phychoses and psychiatrists since the war. True, there are people with twisted minds, and psychiatric treatment has done wonders in many cases. But too many people have turned to this new science of the mind to escape from responsibilities and irksome situations. After all, about all any psychiatrist can do is to help the patient to make the best of his circumstances, "to adjust to his environment."

Miss Norris scrites today about the many women who have to overcome some physical defects. The woman who is homely and auckward has a hard time. She is not wanted in many jobs, and she 's shunned socially, It is easy for her to slump into a defeatist attitude, to scallow in selfpity. She feels that she has no friends, no opportunities and that there is no use trying to amount to anything.

It is to these scomen that Miss Norris addresses this article. She tells them how they can surpass their lovely sisters by making themselves so useful and necessary that in time they will gain everyone's af-

'Useful and Beloved.' As for Beatrice, what she needs, and what her family needs, is character. No outside analyst can do any good there. The family needs patience, generusity, love and confidence for its least fortunate member. And Bestrice needs a good strong dose of some such creed as

In previous years the welfare fund ising organizations from coast to ast have been known by a varity of names and their symbols ve been many and varied. In 1948, or the first time, practically all of hem are known as Community hests and all fly the Red Feather. Many Join Movement.

Last year, 849 cities in the counraised close to a quarter billion llars through community fund nising campaigns. These cities ach conducted a single campaign to hise funds to support multiple welhre agencies.

It was in Cleveland, Ohlo, that the Community Chest plan was born in 1913. A group of Cleveland business men, aware of the many fund drives held each year and of the vast sums spent annually to raise money for welfare purposes, evolved a plan to budget the city's welfare needs and to hold one campaign annually to obtain the money to meet these needs.

Vets Subsistence Allowance

Recent legislation placing a limitation on subsistence allowances for for education or training who are ures 17 inches-if you've never has brought a flood of inquiries here is an excellent one with resident theatrical companies. cerning this phase.

Briefly, the new law provides that 'in no event shall the rate of such allowance plus the compensation received exceed $175 per month for the veteran without dependents or $200 per month if he has a dependent or dependents." The limitation applies to veterans whether they are earning money outside while going to school or earning wages in apprentice or on-the-job training. In other words, if a veteran is going to school and earning $150 per month on the outside, his subsistence would be cut from $65 per month to $25 per month to come within the $175 per month limitation, if he is without dependents. Veterans administration says that for perhaps three months, perhaps longer, veterans will get the same amount they have been getting in the past, but that enclosed with each check mailed up to October 31 will be a notice from the VA describing the changes in the G.I. Bill and warning each veteran that he later may have to return some of the money he now is receiving in subsistence allowance during this interim period. The same notice asks each veteran to give his training officer or regional office not later than November 5, a statement of his earnings during August, September and October. Veterans are warned that further checks will be delayed until this notice is received, so they should be sure to meet the November 5 deadline. After the veteran has turned in his notice, VA will start making adjustments in any subsistence allowance that requires changes. If there is a refund due the government, however, no time limit is set for returning this
